Highlights

A legal educationist, a law practitioner by profession, I have cleaved my time in teaching at multifarious levels. My proclivity in teaching is underpinned by my association with a number of establishments. Professional expertise as an occasional practitioner primarily revolves around Company, Commercial, Land, Construction, Banking and Family Law, as I strive to broaden the purview of my specialised proficiency through literary works, accrual of knowledge, eternal optimism and idealism. Much of my academic benevolence is apportioned in grooming over 600 students enrolled under London College of Legal Studies (South), which self-praises to be the first and only Affiliate Centre of University of London International Programmes in Bangladesh, the only distance learning Support Centre of Northumbria University as well as the only recognised Support Centre of BPP University in Bangladesh.
