

Online Training on “Nuts and Bolts of Commercial Arbitration” organised by Bangladesh International Arbitration Centre (BIAC)

It is certain that arbitration is the clear choice over traditional litigation. Every practitioner, and their principals, would be wise to give serious consideration to arbitration as a preferred method to resolving disputes. It's time efficient and cost-effective, and its benefits far outweigh the risks of a courtroom battle. The results can be a win-win for both sides.

This course will provide you with key information on how disputes work in international cross-border transactions and how to avoid them. It will also help to create greater understanding of the mechanisms of Arbitration processes in the region.

Lawyers, as well as other advisors to businesses engaged in cross-border transactions, will find this course essential. During the course, you will learn about

- Drafting an arbitration clause
- Initiation of arbitration (or whether to fight arbitration or not)
- Selection of arbitrators
- Discovery and other pre-hearing procedures
- The hearing itself
- Challenging or enforcing an award
